Atelier Nigo

Nigo, the man who founded the infamous Japanese fashion brand A Bathing Ape, is a true collector with a wide range of interests. For the 20th anniversary of Bape, they transformed his former home into a Bape museum which showed a big part of Nigo's collection. The book Atelier by Nigo was already released a couple of months ago by Casa Books which is curated by the Japanese fashion magazine Casa Brutus.

Someday, when someone writes the definitive book looking back on how the internet changed life in the 21st century, they'll include stories like Atelier Bingo's: After living in Paris for two years post-graduation, Adèle Favreau and Maxime Prou decided on a whim one day to leave their burgeoning graphic design careers behind for a life in the countryside, and guess what? It didn't make a lick ...
